This form was prepared as part of a research/survey/nomination project in 2011-2012 funded by a HRDP grant from the State Historical Society of Iowa for the nomination of the Washington Downtown Historic District. The project was primarily structured to develop the nomination for the downtown, with additional research on each building documented on an Iowa Site Inventory form. The information below is taken from the table in the August 2012 draft of the nomination, with additional information documented on the property and photographs in the following sections.

7. Narrative Description
The church sits at the northwest corner of N. Marion and W. 2nd Street, facing Marion to the south. A large copper dome majestically adorns the roof of this Classical Revival structure. There are twelve small wood framed, stained glass windows just below the dome, continuing all the way around its base. There is a large two-story, four-bay portico with pediment roofline on the south side of the building. The two center bays have stained glass, double, wood frame entries with a stained glass transom window above each. On either side of these entries is a window. Four windows extend across the center section of the second story. Unless noted otherwise the windows throughout the church are side by side vertical stained glass windows with square stained glass transoms, creating a center cross with the mullions. The portico has engage Doric columns. A single paneled, modern, metal framed door is located at ground level to the right and left of this portico, with a window above each entry on the second story. A decorative stone cornice band wraps around the building at the top level of the columns on the south side. A second, wider cornice band wraps around several feet above the first.

The east side is likewise divided into a center four-bay section flanked by slightly projected end sections, with the east side of the north/rear section extending to the north. The north end section has a entry portico extending from the building with round columns and a gable roof. The metal door is newer but the entry itself is trimmed out with decorative stonework and an arch. There are six windows on the first story to the left/south of this rear entry portico. There are six windows on the second story of the main section of the church. A window is also found on each story of the side of the rear section. The basement windows have been filled in with concrete.

The west side is a mirror image of the east, with the exception of a skywalk to the Wesley Center attached to the building just above the rear side entry. This skywalk was added in 1977 with the construction of the Wesley Center on the lot to the west of the church.

There are eight windows on the north (alley) side of the building with no entrance. The basement windows on this side have also been filled.

8. Narrative Statement of Significance

The First Methodist Episcopal Church appears to contribute historically and architecturally to the Washington Downtown Historic District. It was one of several churches built historically on the blocks just removed from the square. On the Washington Downtown Historic District nomination, the Wesley Center is counted as a non-contributing building on this property, and it had its own Iowa Site Inventory form prepared (92-00584).

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1839 about one-and-one-half miles south of Washington at the home of William L. Harvey. The church was moved into town in 1846 to the corner of Green and Jefferson. In 1856, they then built a new brick church at the southwest corner of 2nd Street (now Avenue B) and Madison (now Second St), and it was dedicated on June 27, 1857 at a cost of $6,900. Membership was around 200 in 1880. In 1891, the church began to plan construction of a new building at 301 W. 2nd Street (extant - see #92-00347), and they hired architects Foster and Liebbe of Des Moines, who had designed the courthouse and were working on the new opera house in town. The church was built by local contractor Frank Edworthy for $17,000. Total cost of construction was around $20,000. The new Methodist Episcopal Church was dedicated on April 10, 1892 (History of Washington County, Iowa 1880: 561; Washington Press, May 13, 1891; Washington Press, December 23, 1891, 3; Burrell 1909, Vol. 1: 255).

The church membership continued to grow in the early 20th century, and the church began to make plans for a newer, larger, building. The 430 members in 1892 had grown to nearly 1,100 members. A committee was appointed in May 1911, with plans to raise at least $40,000 before beginning construction. The Methodist Episcopal Church purchased this property on April 2, 1912 from Cordelia A Roso, et al. At this time, a house stood on the corner lot (8), while Lot 7 to the west was vacant with a garage. Eckland and Dearmont of Moline, Illinois were selected as architects for the building. Little is known of this firm. Henry Eckland began his practice as an architect in Kewanee, IL, after graduating from the University of Illinois in 1894. By 1917, he practiced as Eckland, Fugard, and Knapp, with offices in Chicago and Moline, IL. He is noted as having designed a large number of public and private buildings, including the Moline High School, M.E. Church in Washington, and Swedish Lutheran Church in DeKalb (Olson, The Swedish Element in Illinois 1917: 653-654 - online at books.google.com/books?id=ato0AAAAIAAJ&pg).

Construction on the $85,000 church started in 1912, with the contract let on July 12. Washington Brick and Tile Company supplied the brick for the building. The church raised $75,000 for the construction and paid off the remaining debt over the next few years. Seating capacity was around 1,200, and a canopy near the rear of the west side permitted covered drop-off for members. The new church was dedicated on April 26, 1914. The house on the corner to the west (lot 5) was used as the parsonage (“Building in 1912,” Evening Journal, April 26, 1913, 1; “Washington M.E. Church,” Evening Journal, April 3, 1926, 3; Fisher 1978: 152; "Methodists Make Plans for Church," Evening Journal, April 27, 1912, 1)). An article from 1934 notes: “The building is made of Roman stone and faces the south with entrances on both the East and the West. All of the floors are available from each of the entrances. The church is complete in every respect, it being one of the most attractive auditoriums in the state. The choir loft is a significant feature of the building as it will seat seventy people and is unusually well furnished with a $4,000 pipe organ, a gift of Elizabeth Snider in memory of her husband. The large rooms are so arranged that a wall partition can be dropped from the ceiling making it possible to have either two large auditoriums or one larger one. The church will seat 1400 people.” (“Early Places of Worship for Washington Methodists," Evening Journal, December 12, 1934, 24).

In 1977, the house was demolished and a new educational building (Wesley Center) was built on the lot (see #92-00584, 220 W. 2nd St).

The First Methodist Episcopal Church continues to use this building today.
