7. Narrative Description
This two-story, two-storefront brick building has been remodeled several times since its 1892 construction, including initially around 1957. The tan brick on the storefront was added around this time, and the stucco on the upper facade was added in 2006, replacing a pent roof added in the 1970s. The primary first-story entry is on the left side, slightly recessed to allow a gently slope from sidewalk to entry. There is a large, two light glass window to the right of the entry, and the bulkhead is clad in tan brick. At the center of the facade are two steel doors which provide access to the second story. On the right side of the facade is a large single light with a high sill. Arch details in stucco have been added above each of these first story openings. The second story windows are as follows, from left to right: a modern two light crank out style window with glass transoms above the sashes; two tall narrow double hung windows, and another modern two light crank style window with transoms over the sashes. Stucco has been applied to imitate Romanesque arches over the windows as well. Finally, stucco detail has created "brackets" along the parapet. The original brick wall and segmental arch window is visible on the east side, between this building and the rear of the adjacent building.

8. Narrative Statement of Significance

This building appears to be non-contributing within the Washington Downtown Historic District, due to the recent facade remodeling. From the history of the occupants and owners, it appears that this building started as two separate but adjoining structures that were united in the 1970s when the law office purchased them. The exterior was originally remodeled prior to the 1971 photograph, removing the bay windows and cladding the facade to create a more streamlined appearance typical of the 1950s. The recent facade work has created false arches and brackets for a more "historic" look.

The 1892 Sanborn map shows an earlier building on this site. In March 1892, Susan McClelland bought west 20' and east 20' of the west 40 feet of Lot 2 in Block 17. On October 15, 1892, she sold the west 20' to Margaret McConnaughey, and then sold the east 20' of the west 40' to John McConnaughey. The December 28, 1892 construction notes in the Washington Press state that W.A. Stiles built a $4,000 block for the McConnaughey brothers in 1892. William A. Stiles constructed two large blocks just west of the square in 1892. He built the $8,000 three-story, three-storefront block for G.P. Kerchner at 213-215-217 W. Main Street, which had offices on the first story and apartments on the upper two stories (State Site #92-00545, Map #5). Its location across from the 1887 courthouse attracted several lawyers and other professionals to the offices in this building over the years. The overall brick form was basic, with a slight gable roof rather than a parapet, simple brick details, and segmental arch windows. Stiles also built a similar, yet smaller scaled, two-story, two-storefront, brick building at 209-211 W. Washington for the McConnaughey brothers at 209-211 W. Washington. This building also is indicated as a combination office/dwelling function, and the original facade was likely similar to the building at 213-217 W. Main. The “rowhouse” office/dwelling of Dr. William and Susan McClelland immediately to the west likely built in the next couple years may have also been built by Stiles (State Site #92-00611, Map #69). This basic brick design likewise has simple segmental arch openings and a restrained metal cornice with brackets.

In August 1894, Margaret McConnaughey sold her half to John McConnaughey. He then sold the west half of the building in December 1894 to J.H. Stewart. Both the 1897 and 1902 Sanborn maps show a dwelling at 211 W. Washington Street. The 1900 census lists John N. Stewart, druggist, age 59, as living next to Dr. William McClelland (213 W. Washington). He lived here with wife Rachel, age 60, who had two living children, daughter Mary, sister Agnes, her son Walker, and a servant.

The 1897 Sanborn map shows a double-width building with bay windows. A dwelling and office is located in the east half (then 207) and a dwelling is located in the west half (then 209). The Washington Evening Journal in May of 1897 advertises the office of T.T. Keeley, real estate and notary public, at the 209 location (east half). The 1903 City Directory confirms this was also Keeley's residence.

The east half transferred from John to Lucretia McConnaughery, single, on April 4, 1900, who then sold it to Josephine Miller on May 1, 1903. She sold it to R.H. Mapel on March 21, 1912. On February 10, 1915, Edmund Morrison bought the east half from R.H. Mapel. Then, on February 4, 1919, he bought the west half from C.W. Stewart et al. During the first two decades of the 20th century, the west (211) remained a dwelling. The 1902 Sanborn map shows an office and dwelling yet in the east half (209), and the 1909 Sanborn map lists pianos & music at 209. Per the 1910 city directory, Willis Bradley, jeweler and watchmaker, occupied the building. The 1917 Sanborn map has a tailor at 209 and a dwelling at 211.

In 1919, Edmund Morrison owned both halves of the building. In 1910, he is listed as a lawyer with an office at 110 1/2 W. Main. He continued to be listed at this location through 1956. Thus, this building appears to have been acquired as an investment property. He continued to own it until his death in the early 1970s. The 1920 census lists plumber William and Olga Buss rented the 211 (west) half, with widow Margaret Pratt at 211 1/2. 209 1/2 was listed with Thomas and Hattie Schilling living there with brother-in-law Robert Badger and his wife Mary.

In 1921, Wardrobe Cleaners, run by Charles W. Davis, opened in the 209 (east) half. In August 1939, they had provided dry cleaning service in Washington for 18 years, offering cleaning of clothing, hats, and household furnishings (Evening Journal – Centennial Celebration – August 1939 - page 17). W.S. (Pen) Eldridge sold Mass. Mutual Insurance in an office over Wardrobe Cleaners (Evening Journal – Centennial Celebration – August 1939 - page 43). In 1941, Eldridge and Eldridge Insurance occupy the second floor, as does W.S. Eldridge, Justice of the Peace. Wardrobe Cleaners continued to be listed here in the 1941 city directory. The business was then bought from Charles Davis by Harry Marlowe (Washington Evening Journal, 60th Anniversary Edition, February 27, 1953, page 67). In 1949, it was advertised as Marlowe's Wardrobe Cleaners and then became simply Marlowe's Cleaners by the 1952 city directory. By the 1956 directory, Watson Sta-Nu Cleaners is listed at 209 W. Washington. In the 1964 city directory, J.J. Mattes Income Tax Counselor is located here.

The 211 half appears to have been converted to a business at some point in the 1920s, with the first occupant identified was the Johnston Barber Shop & Beauty Parlor in the 1932 and 1935 city directories. Lucille's Beauty Shop is then listed here in 1941. In May 1946, the Wehr Studio, photography, advertised as located here. The Ken-Rene’ Studio is then listed here in the 1952 and 1956 directories.

In the 1964 directory, Morrison, Morrison & Lloyd law office is listed at 211. The Morrison & Morrison office is last listed at 110 1/2 W. Main in 1956, and the office of Morrison, Morrison, & Morrison opened in a new building at 213 S. Marion in 1957. Thus, it appears that the other Morrison law office also moved to this building around this time, adding Lloyd as a partner, and likely remodeling the facade to the appearance depicted in the 1971 photograph. The Morrison, Lloyd, McConnell, & Mullins law office was here in 1990. Edmund D. Morrison Jr inherited the property from his father in 1972, and he continued to own it until his death in 1997. His estate then sold the property to Washington Properties LC. The remodeled the facade of the building in 2006-07.

A history of the current law firm states: The Law Firm of Lloyd, McConnell, Davis & Lujan, L.L.P. was originally established in 1903 by Edmund D. Morrison, Sr. At that time he had an office located on the north side of the Washington square in Washington, Iowa. His son, Edmund Dunham Morrison, joined the law firm in 1933. In 1954 the law practice was moved to its present day location at 211 West Washington Street in Washington. James E. Lloyd then joined the firm in 1961. He is currently the senior partner of the law firm. Joseph L McConnell joined the law firm in 1977, followed by Craig A. Davis in 1990, and Katie M. Lujan in 2001 (www.washingtonlawoffice.org).
