7. Narrative Description

Historic photographs and extant buildings with integrity reveal that the early second generation commercial buildings were built at heights of two or three stories with simple brick detail from the 1850s to 1870s. The edges of the brick buildings were framed by brick pilasters, and windows had simple flat lintels. The three-story buildings constructed were nearly as short as later two story buildings, providing little differentiation in later building heights on blocks. The Blair Building at 122 S. Iowa is one of the only intact examples of this building type.

This is a three story brick commercial building with a two story brick addition at the rear. It is located on the southeast corner of the square, facing S. Iowa Ave and Central Park to the west. The primary facade is red brick. The pilasters define the edges of the building, with a wide frieze across the top with the parapet. Four star tie-rods are found on each pilaster. Two rows of brick are found under this frieze. The building has a recently remodeled storefront. The storefront's primary entry, a wood door with a single light, is on the left. Two large display windows with wood bulkheads are located in the remainder of the facade. There are three one-over-one-light double-hung windows on the second story. and on the third story. The windows have flared jack arch brick lintels slightly inset in the wall and stone sills.

The south elevation faces E. Washington to the south. The front portion of the first story has no windows, though there are a series of stair tie-rods, and then there is an iron stairway and balcony to a door on the second story. On the first story, below the balcony, there is a one-over-one-light double-hung window with a stone sill and flat stone lintel. The second story of the main three-story portion of the building has four one-over-one-light double-hung windows with stone sills and flat stone lintels, in addition to the door on the east end. The third story has four one-over-one-light double-hung windows with stone sills and flat stone lintels as well. The remainder of the south elevation is the side of the rear (east) two-story brick addition. The first story has a one-over-one-light double-hung window, side entry, and three one-over-one-light double-hung windows with stone sills and segmental arch lintels. The second story has five one-over-one-light double-hung windows with stone sills and segmental arch lintels.

Interestingly, interior access to the second story is via a stairway in the adjacent building to the north which was built around 1858. Hence, what was an exterior staircase was then enclosed with that construction.

8. Narrative Statement of Significance

The William Blair & Son dry goods store appears to contribute historically and architecturally to the Downtown Washington Historic District.

Transfer records in Washington before 1866 do not indicate the seller or date of sale, nor do they provide a detailed property description. Per the 1913 history of William Blair & Son, the building was constructed by James Dawson in 1856. J Dawson & Co advertised a dry goods store on the southeast corner of the square in 1857 and 1859. William Blair entered the dry goods business here in 1864, after returning from the Civil War. McFarland, Brokaw & Co. then owned part of Lot 7. The west half of Lot 7, 22 ft. in width, was sold to George Brokaw by McFarland in July 1867. The 1869 Bird's Eye View drawing of Washington, though providing a rear view of this block, seems to show a brick building on this site. Blair & Brokaw are listed here by 1871, and they continued to operate here in the 1880s. Two notices in the Washington Press, the first on March 1, 1876, announce "Wm. Blair and C.H. Wilson are building brick rear additions to their stores." The second notice, on July 19, 1876, says, "A.H. Patterson & Son have moved their Law Office. They will be found henceforth in the new room over Blair & Brokaw's store, and may be reached by the outside iron stairway." The earliest ads for Blair & Brokaw Dry Goods store comes from the Washington Gazette in May 1881, and the 1885 Sanborn map shows a dry goods store at this location. In 1887, Charles Blair bought out Brokaw and joined his father in the business. William Blair & Son operated here from 1887 to around 1925.
1880 – I.O.O.F. – Odd Fellows – lodge room in building of Blair & Brokaw – southeast corner of square – about 80 members – $1,500 in investments - N. G., E. Hoover; V. G., T. Minnick; secretary, W. B. Mason; treasurer, D. Welch (History of Washington County 1880: 558)

Evening Journal, April 3, 1926, page 38 (F) – H.I. Ward – died on February 12, 1926 – surprise – had just bought out J.B. Crail store – bought William Blair & Son store a few months previous

The 1892 Sanborn map indicates there were offices on the 2nd floor, and a business card published in the Washington Press in Mary 1868 places Dr. D.J. Dewey's “Office over Blair & Brokaw's store, southeast corner of the square.” Dr. Dewey began advertising earlier than Blair & Brokaw, and has a business card in the Press as early as 1865, locating his office on the southeast corner of the square. A.H. Patterson & Son were then listed above Blair's store from 1876 through the 1880s. Dr. O.E. Rork (dentist) and C.C. Patterson (lawyer) were then above the store in the 1890s.

William Blair & Son apparently closed in late 1925 or early 1926. The 1926 telephone directory lists The Ninety-Eight Cent Store at this address. In 1934 and 1935 telephone directories, the occupant is the DeWit Grocery.

In the 1940s, Sorden Music Company moved from 118 E. Washington to this building. Sorden Music Company is here in the 1952 telephone directory.

Everett's Music is here in a 1956 Washington Journal ad, and then they moved to the north side of the square. The 1964 directory lists Klein Klothing Kompany as the occupant. They had operated for many years at 101-103 W. Washington before moving to this locaiton. They were still here in 1971.

It is currently occupied by Cafe Dodici.
